WILLIAM ROBERT GEIB Jersey City, New Jersey
Sixth Battalion | 32nd Company

Bill came to Annapolis from Jersey City where he excelled in football and baseball. After giving plebe baseball a whirl, he settled down to Company and Battalion sports where he enjoyed knocking heads with the best. His aggressive play led the hard charging defensive line on the Brigade Championship football team. Never one to burn the midnight oil, but always standing well up in his class, Bill was envied by many who found the studies harder. He made friends easily and passed through the rigors of plebe year hampered but little by his accent. The Gun Club commanded his attention on non-dragging weekends, but he did his best to make these infrequent. Confident and capable, Bill's aspirations to join Naval Aviation can not but lead to an outstanding career.
